Nevada Airports Association Announces Name Change to Nevada Aviation Association

Carson City, NV - October 30, 2020. The Nevada Airports Association, an association of airport executives, policy-makers, and corporate supporters announced today that it has changed its name to the Nevada Aviation Association. The name change is another step in the evolution of the association which was first organized in 2005 as the Nevada Airport Managers Association.

The name change reflects NvAA's new mission to promote and support Nevada's airports and the larger aviation community and goal to expand its membership to include providers of aviation related products and services; airline, helicopter, unmanned autonomous vehicles and fixed-based operators, charter companies and other aviation related organizations and agencies.

Nevada has a rich aviation history beginning with the first air flight in 1910 near Carson City which was also of national interest because an air journey had never been made at such an altitude (4,675 feet). Today, Nevada aviation is diverse and includes commercial, corporate and sport flying, military operations, and unmanned aerial systems testing.

NvAA President and Carson City Airport Manager, Kenneth G. Moen, A.A.E., commented, "Expanding our focus on aviation will benefit Nevada's airport system and create significant opportunities for our communities. We look forward to growing our membership and creating a stronger and more diverse organization to support one of Nevada's key industries.

The Nevada Aviation Association promotes public understanding of the value of aviation and airports and is a unified voice on airport and aviation related policies and funding.
